If the Licensee's use of the Software is enjoined in connection with the Claim or the Licensor believes it reasonably could be enjoined, the Licensor may choose to either modify the Software to be non-infringing (while substantially preserving its utility and functionality) or obtain a license to allow for continued use of the Software or if these alternatives are not commercially reasonable, Licensor may terminate Licensee's right to access and use the Software and refund the amount paid for the Software Total Fees in the Order Form (subject to depreciation on a straight line five-year basis). (b) cease all Processing (other than merely storing and maintaining the security of the affected Personal Data) until such time as the Controller issues new Instructions with which Processor is able to comply. If this provision is invoked, the Processor will not be liable to the Controller under the DPA for any failure or interruption in the provision of the Ordered Products until such time as the Controller issues new Instructions in regard to the Processing.

In addition, the Processor shall remain liable for each Sub-Processor's compliance with the obligations of this DPA and for any acts or omissions of such Sub-Processor that cause the Processor an infringement of any of its obligations under this DPA.
- 11.3. Processor's Remedies. Subject to the liability threshold set forth in this DPA, the Processor shall remedy a damage resulting from non-performance or undue performance of an obligation, unless the non-performance or undue performance of an obligation is due to circumstances for which the Processor bears no responsibility, provided that the Processor shall be fully liable for damage intentionally caused to the Controller, in which limited case the limit of liability set forth in this DPA shall not apply.
